

U.S. health officials said Tuesday that they have begun the first clinical trial of an experimental antiviral drug, remdesivir, from Gilead Sciences (gild. O).
According to the National Institutes of health, the first trial patient was an American who returned from quarantine on the diamond princess. The study was conducted at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.